Pack something linen. We're going to Mérida.

A note for Sam, from Alex

Dear Sam,

I've been sitting on this for a week and I can't anymore: the trip is booked. Seven days in the white city, with pastel streets, plazas that fill up after sundown, and a cenote nearly every afternoon.

I know you've wanted to see the Yucatán since we watched that documentary about the ruins, so I planned the whole thing around the places you kept pausing on. All you have to do is clear your calendar and remember sunscreen.

The plan

When	March 12 to 19
Where	A courtyard house near Paseo de Montejo
Day trips	Uxmal, Chichén Itzá, and the Cuzamá cenotes
Required	At least one marquesita a day

Counting down already,

Alex
